AUTUMN CONFERENCE 2014

ATTACHMENT, MEMORY LOSS and AGEING

Speakers:
Richard Bowlby
Angela Cotter
Susie Henley
Hazel Leventhal
Anastasia Patrikiou
Pam Schweitzer
Kate White

Special Guest: Sara Kestelman

Saturday 20th September 2014 at The Institute for Child Health, London
The aim of this conference is to explore the emerging recognition of the centrality of attachment theory in understanding the particular needs and vulnerabilities of people who have memory losses linked with ageing. It will be bringing together different contributions from both informal and professional carers to share their experiences and will be looking at the way memory loss raises fears of disappearing connections in us all.

We will also explore how being alongside those who are marginalised and impacted by loss of memory are empowered by the use of reminiscence groups, music and the arts.

We will discuss how we can learn as a community about a shared narrative of loss associated with memory difficulties leading to deepening attachments, and the renewal of emotional bonds with the creation of new meanings.

Who is this conference for?
The conference welcomes people working in the voluntary sector, nurses, doctors, social workers, community care workers, informal carers, psychologists, counsellors, students, psychotherapists, and others who are interested in exploring this theme with us.

John Bowlby revolutionised our understanding of human nature and the needs of children in particular for consistent, sensitive and attuned caregiving from a preferred attachment figure. Attachment is linked to the human response to fear and is most clearly evident when there are threats of separation and abandonment. At these times we need a safe haven provided by an attachment figure from whom we seek safety and affect regulation.

“Intimate attachments to other human beings are the hub around which a person’s life revolves, not only when he is an infant or a toddler or a school-child but throughout his adolescence and his years of maturity as well, and on into old age.” Bowlby (1980, p. 422)

Since 1976 The Bowlby Centre (formerly known as CAPP) has developed as an organization committed to the practice of attachment-based psychoanalytic psychotherapy. The Bowlby Centre is a dynamic, rapidly developing charity which aims both to train attachment-based psychoanalytic psychotherapists and to deliver a psychotherapy service to those who are most marginalized and frequently excluded from long term psychotherapy.
We provide a five year (+) part-time psychotherapy training accredited by the UKCP and operate a psychotherapy referral service for the public including the low cost Blues Project. The Bowlby Centre has a wealth of experience in the fields of attachment and loss and particular expertise in working with trauma and abuse. As part of our ongoing commitment to anti-discriminatory practice we offer a consultation service to the public and private sectors and are engaged in outreach and special projects working with care leavers, women experiencing violence and abuse, offenders and ex offenders, people struggling with addiction to drugs, alcohol, eating difficulties or self harm, and to individuals and groups in a wide variety of mental health settings.

We run short courses on “Attachment and Dissociation”, and “The Application of Attachment Theory to Clinical Issues” including learning disabilities. The Bowlby Centre organises conferences including the annual John Bowlby Memorial Lecture, and has a series of publications which aim to further thinking and development in the field of attachment.

Bowlby Centre members participate extensively in all aspects of the field, making outstanding theoretical, research, and clinical contributions. Their cutting edge work is consistently published in the leading journals and monographs.

The Bowlby Centre is committed to the following clinical values:

• We believe that mental distress has its origin in failed or inadequate attachment relationships in early life and is best treated in the context of a long-term human relationship.

• Attachment relationships are shaped in a social world that includes poverty, discrimination and social inequality. The effects of the social world are a necessary part of the therapy.

• Psychotherapy should be available to all, and from the attachment perspective, especially those discriminated against or described as ‘unsuitable’ for therapy.

• Psychotherapy needs to be provided with respect, warmth, openness, a readiness to interact and relate, and free from discrimination of any kind.

• Those who have been silenced about their experiences and survival strategies need to have their reality acknowledged and not pathologised.

• The Bowlby Centre values inclusiveness, access, diversity, authenticity and excellence. All participants in our organization share the responsibility for anti-discriminatory practice in relation to race, ethnicity, gender, sexuality, age, (dis)ability, religion, class, educational and learning style.

SIR RICHARD BOWLBY

Richard, Patron of The Bowlby Centre, worked as a scientific photographer in various medical research institutions where he produced visual aids for communicating research findings. He now gives lectures to health care professionals using video material and personal insights to promote a much broader understanding of his father’s work on attachment theory. He supports a range of organisations that address challenging attachment issues, and is seeking ways to help the general public benefit from a better understanding of attachment relationships.

DR ANGELA COTTER

Angela became interested in memory loss when her step-grandmother developed Alzheimer’s disease. She developed this as a NHS nursing home manager and action researcher working to improve older peoples’, and their carers’, experience. This led into involvement in policy-making and the ‘new culture of dementia care’ combining her psychotherapeutic perspective in her clinical work and research. Her work has included a co-operative action research study within the NHS about the use of creative arts involving people with dementia and their staff. As a Jungian analyst specialising in the wounded healer, she continues to work on the significance of the growth of memory loss and dementia for individuals and within the collective. As a teacher of the last part of the life-cycle at The Bowlby Centre she feels that attachment is very important within the context of memory loss and dementia.

DR SUSIE HENLEY

Susie has worked in the field of dementia for over a decade. Following her PhD in neuroscience she trained as a clinical psychologist and now has a joint clinical and research role at the Specialist Cognitive Disorders Service at the National Hospital in London. Susie has developed the psychological input to this neurology-led dementia diagnosis and treatment service and offers short-term therapeutic intervention to patients and their families. Referrals are mainly for rare, inherited and early-onset dementias so Susie’s work ranges from explaining brain-behaviour links to patients, to helping families develop their understanding of symptoms and supporting people through the many challenges that a dementia diagnosis presents. Her research is focused on developing early tests for memory problems in Alzheimer’s disease, as well as more qualitative evaluation of the lived experience of people with dementia and their families, and how their needs can be better met.

SARA KESTELMAN

An Olivier Award winner as Fraulein Schneider in Sam Mendes’ Cabaret at The Donmar, Sara has appeared extensively with the RSC, RNT, on screen, radio and in the West End. She created the role of Margrethe Bohr in Michael Frayn’s award winning Copenhagen, and has appeared in many musicals including Fiddler on the Roof, Nine and Coco Chanel in Coco. Recently Sara was in the BAFTA winning series 2 In the Flesh and From There to Here. She is a published poet and song writer and has performed her one woman show All About Me! internationally. A reader with the charity Interact Reading Service dedicated to recoverers from stroke, she is making a film about her work with one remarkable woman, Nan Millard. Sara has just finished Summer Book at The Unicorn, is soon to direct a new musical Brass and is in a feature film comedy The Last Sparks of Sundown due out shortly.

HAZEL LEVENTHAL

Hazel trained as a psychotherapist at The Bowlby Centre where she has taught the mid-life part of The Life Cycle seminar. She cared for her elderly father and her elder sister, who suffered from early-onset Alzheimer’s disease, and has written about these experiences in a play called “My Sister, Disappearing”. She has worked as a Samaritan and is a member of The Alzheimer’s Society and has done some publicity work on their behalf.

ANASTASIA PATRIKIOU

Anastasia is a psychoanalytic psychotherapist, training therapist and supervisor. After a career as an architect, she completed a postgraduate diploma in counselling at Strathclyde University and an attachment-based psychoanalytic psychotherapy training at The Bowlby Centre. She has been in private practice since 2003, and is currently also working with people with eating difficulties at the Priory Hospital. She worked in NHS primary care for a number of years and developed and managed The Talking Therapies Project, a Department of Health pilot project undertaken by Age UK, Camden to enable access to therapeutic support by older people with early to mid-stage Dementia. This was successfully mainstreamed. Originating from a migratory background, she has a particular interest in trauma, loss, and the impact of displacement on relational structures and identity narratives.

PAM SCHWEITZER, MBE

Pam was founder and Artistic Director of Age Exchange Theatre Trust from 1983 - 2005, the first full-time professional theatre company to specialise in touring reminiscence theatre across the UK and Europe. In 2000 she was awarded the MBE for services to Reminiscence and she continues to direct the European Reminiscence Network, lecturing, directing and training in reminiscence. She is an Honorary Fellow of the University of Greenwich. Reminiscence is a vital way to stimulate communication and promote confidence and self-worth in people with dementia. Her approach is to give those who care for people with dementia a clear sense of how reminiscence can be used to greatly improve their quality of life, opening the world’s first Reminiscence Centre in London in 1987, as a focus for professional training, a meeting place for people of all generations and cultures to participate in reminiscence projects. She has published widely on her work - see www.pamschweitzer.com

KATE WHITE

Kate is a training therapist, supervisor and teacher at The Bowlby Centre. She is also editor of the journal, Attachment: New Directions in Psychotherapy and Relational Psychoanalysis. Prior to training as a psychotherapist Kate was a senior lecturer at The South Bank University, London, in the Department of Nursing and Community Health Studies where she developed an innovative diploma in district nursing. This is where her interest in the care of those who become vulnerable thorough memory loss and ageing originated. The perspective provided by attachment theory has, in her view, a great deal to offer carers and family members alike. In addition to working as an individual psychotherapist, Kate writes about psychotherapy education and runs workshops on the themes of attachment and trauma in clinical practice.
