11am to 1pm

Data Protection and GDPR: What you need to know (and do) in your everyday practice

Synopsis:

Graham Johnston will be leading an interactive clinical forum focusing on what we as practitioners need to know and do in response to the recent General Data Protection Regulation. There is quite a degree of fear and confusion in our sector about how the new legislation affects us, so Graham will be trying to settle those nerves and remove some of the confusion. In advance of the forum, Graham will be asking participants to send him their biggest fears or burning questions about the impact of GDPR so that he can make the session as personal and useful as possible. You can send your questions to: graysjohnston@hotmail.com.

About the speaker:

Graham Johnston is a graduate of The Bowlby Centre (intake 2010) and works in private practice at his home in Brockley, South East London. He previously worked in the civil service in a variety of policy and operational roles, and is now the Policy Director of The Bowlby Centre, where data protection is one of his lead areas of responsibility.
